In 2012, always within the context of the fight against hunger, we focus on Millennium Development Goal 6, which invites us to work to reduce the incidence rate of AIDS, malaria and tuberculosis in the poorest communities on the Earth. We also try to raise awareness on Chagas disease, dengue, sleeping sickness and all the “forgotten diseases”, so named since, as they mainly affect the poorest and are not very frequent in the rich North, not much research is carried out on them. Unfortunately, such issues are a reality in our world today. At Manos Unidas we work so they will cease to be so.

Africa is the continent worst hit. The causes that collaborate to making this so are various, and among them we have the wars and conflicts raging in so many countries, which prevent development projects from being carried out in them.

As for Asia, we see how the combination of tuberculosis and AIDS causes millions of deaths every year. Two thirds of the cases of tuberculosis occur in Asia. This disease, believed to be under control, has reappeared and in a particularly devastating way, bringing lethal consequences when combined with HIV/AIDS. It is vital to work on its prevention, as we can see in the projects we support.

America continues to suffer great inequalities, aggravated by the global economic crisis.

The slogan of the 2012 campaign was: “Health, everyone’s right”. And the second part of the slogan invited us not to remain passive: “Act now!”; without that support, our work would be affected, because in our sector we can also feel the crisis. It is as if a curtain was put in front of the poorest countries, making it more difficult for us to see them. But let’s not be discouraged. Our commitment to them continues, both on the part of Manos Unidas and, I also believe, on that of the whole Spanish population. In 2012 there was a great reduction in income from public sources in our organisation, but as far as that from private sources is concerned, this reduction has been minimum, which, in our case, is very important because this part represents 85.6% of the total.

Therefore, and in spite of the difficulties we’re going through, we could say that the support we receive to combat hunger remains solid. Many thanks to everybody for honouring this commitment. We feel we are not alone. We wish to respond with our day-to-day work, maintaining our hallmark, taking care of values such as austerity and transparency, not forgetting our target as an institution: the poor, the fight against hunger and against its causes. We shall continue to work as long as poverty exists. We continue to work hard for this cause, as we have been doing now for over fifty years.

who are we?

Manos Unidas is the Spanish Catholic Church Organisation for the aid, promotion and development of the Third World. It is at the same time a Catholic and secular Non-Governmental Development Organisation (NGDO), made up of volunteers.

It is our mission to fight against famine, nutritional deficiency, poverty, disease, underdevelopment, and lack of education; and to work to eradicate the structural causes producing them: injustice, unequal distribution of goods and opportunities among people and communities, ignorance, prejudices, lack of solidarity, indifference and the crisis of human and Christian values (Articles of Association, Art. 5).

In 1955 the World Union of Catholic Women's Organisations (WUCWO) declared "war against hunger". In 1959 the call was seconded in Spain by the Catholic Action Women, constituting the "Campaign Against Hunger in Spain", which later would become known as Manos Unidas.

DELEGATIONS

Manos Unidas has a diocesan structure, which means it is present throughout the whole Spanish geography. The mission of the 70 diocesan Delegations of Manos Unidas is to raise the awareness of the population on the global situation and the collecting of donations for the financing of the projects supported by the organisation. In order to meet their objectives a great number of activities are carried out.

VOLUNTARY WORKERS

Manos Unidas defines itself in its Articles of Association as an organisation of voluntary workers. We understand voluntary work as a vocation, giving witness to values such as gratuitousness and solidarity, more than ever necessary in our society today. This distinguishing feature materialises in the 5,304 volunteers who dedicated their time and good work to the organisation all year round. This number of people increases significantly at peak Campaign times. The Manos Unidas governing bodies are made up of volunteers. Together with them, a small number of people have contracts of employment, and they are an inseparable part of the organisation, always respecting the principles and criteria of Manos Unidas.

MEMBERS & COLLABORATORS

Many are the people whose lives have improved thanks to the wholehearted support of the Manos Unidas 85,250 members and collaborators in 2012. This spirit of communion, solidarity, gratuitousness and justice is what drives us on to keep fighting for a better world.

THANKS to them all, the Manos Unidas task is possible

In a globalised world relations between persons, countries and continents are necessary and enriching. Manos Unidas is a member of several international and national organisations:

- Pontifical Council Cor Unum
- CIDSE
- CONCORD
- CONGDE (Coordinator for Spanish Development NGOs)
- Fundación Sur
- Pacto Global Contra la Pobreza
- Foro de Laicos
- Consejo Nacional de Misiones
- Plataforma del Voluntariado de España
- Asociación Española de Fundraising

Manos Unidas/Javier Mármol

Manos Unidas maintains two lines of work:

- raising the awareness and denouncing the existence of hunger and underdevelopment, their causes and possible remedies:
- obtaining economic means to finance the programmes, plans and comprehensive development projects aimed at dealing with these needs.

In 2012, Manos Unidas held its LIII Campaign, which under the slogan “Health: everyone’s right: Act now!” has wished to focus especially on the fight against malaria, AIDS and other diseases, Millennium Development Goal 6.

Raising Public Awareness

One of the main tasks of Manos Unidas is to denounce and make the Spanish society aware of the existence of hunger and underdevelopment, as well as their causes and possible solutions.

The 2012 campaign focused on the protection of everyone's right to health, as embodied in Millennium Development Goal 6, combating HIV/AIDS, malaria and the so-called forgotten diseases, which for being so are more virulent among the poor. With the slogan "Health, everyone's right: Act now!" we wished to transmit the message to the Spanish society that health and development go together. The dissemination of this campaign has been backed by the elaboration of information and advertising materials, as well as the support of the media.

Our aim is for there to be increasingly more people committed to social transformation, who feel responsible for the well-being of others and the need to contribute to the development of those most in need.

To achieve this, we encourage the training of children and young people, as the future of the world is in their hands. We have prepared education in values materials for all educational levels, and supported teachers with courses and workshops to help them carry out this task. For younger children, we have trained Manos Unidas persons in storytelling workshops, organising this activity in schools.

Furthermore, experts in health and development took part in Manos Unidas XI Forum, "Health for Development", which was held in Málaga and other cities in Andalusia, where causes and consequences of the diseases were analysed, and the solutions that are already being implemented with the support of Manos Unidas were shown.

Manos Unidas takes part in different national and international thematic campaigns related to our mission of combating hunger and poverty and focusing on the relationship existing between climate justice, food security and sustainable development. It has been present at important international processes, for example the United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development (Río + 20), Food Security Committee (FAO) and the work processes dialogue for preparing the new global development agenda beyond 2015.

Link Operation

- Link Operation generates relationships between persons or groups of the Spanish society and the communities that receive the support of Manos Unidas, bringing their situation and living conditions closer, and achieving a greater sensitization and commitment toward Southern countries. In 2012, Manos Unidas carried out 501 Link Operations for a total sum of €20,599,612.52.

Projects

In 2012 Manos Unidas has taken part in 56 developing countries supporting 550 very diverse projects and initiatives, arising from people who fight every day to overcome poverty.

More than 870 million people in the world suffer from hunger, victims of an unjust world order, severely suffering the effects of the economic and financial crisis increased by the effects of climate change and environmental degradation. The food crisis is also being accentuated by other factors such as food speculation, biofuels or land grabbing, causing 15% of the world's population to suffer from HUNGER.

projects by continent

The fast economic growth some of the so-called emerging countries must not cause us to lose sight of the increase of an acute and growing inequality in said countries, which leads sectors of the population to abject poverty.

Combating hunger, working for the right to food, is one of the main focuses of the work of Manos Unidas, which we tackle through programmes aimed at guaranteeing the food security of the most vulnerable communities.

Furthermore, persons who are victims of con- flicts, forgotten emergencies (earthquakes, floods, famines...) or trafficking in persons, continue to be at the heart of the work of Manos Unidas, persons we support in countries such as Haiti, Somalia, South Sudan or Burma.

Within a global context of uncertainty, aware of the tough and unjust reality suffered by millions of people all over the world, Manos Unidas, inspired by the principles of the Social Doctrine of the Church, and moved by the suffering of the impoverished and forgotten, continues to support the more vulnerable communities, promoting food security, access to water, health and education, especially in those countries with a low development index and whose States do not guarantee them these basic rights.

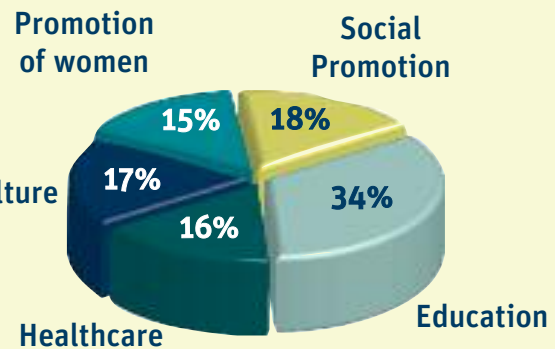

But the fight against poverty in a globalised world like the one we live in, also has to be a global and coordinated response. To do so, we work with other European organisations belonging to the CIDSE network and with the Church Social Services and Southern Caritas members, so that our response to the needs which come to us will be more efficient.

africa

Africa, a continent consisting of 54 countries, nearly all of them classified as the so-called developing countries, since 1995, and especially in recent years, is experiencing strong economic growth due to the rise in the prices of natural resources, the diversification of its exports and the application of new technologies. There is also a rising trend toward the improvement of political institutions and changes in the countries' economic policies.

But Africa has many faces, and this strong economic growth is not always accompanied by improvements in the population's living conditions. We continue to witness interregional conflicts, situations of famine or food crises that highlight the widening of the gap dividing the poor and the rich, in the same continent. Therefore, we paradoxically have to speak of food insecurity in a continent with vast extensions of fertile land, large amounts of water and an optimal climate for many crops. And that food insecurity is accompanied by war conflicts that lead to thousands of displaced persons, refugees and deaths.

From Manos Unidas we support the empowerment of the rural population, making special emphasis on children, young people and women, giving them the education and training they require to allow them to defend themselves against the agricultural policies carried out by their governments in favour of the emerging foreign powers, defending their right to the land and basic services.

Mozambique is a country rich in raw materials and fertile land, but which suffers cyclical famine in some areas. Every year we train 320 young people in farming techniques at the Martín Cipriano Institute in Mozambique so that they can defend family agriculture, also replicating this knowledge in their home villages, thus multiplying the project's effect.

america

Latin America is the continent of inequality. Latin-American relationships –between persons and countries- are based on inequality. Some countries even appear as “emerging”, with high levels of income, but in all of them most of their inhabitants suffer abject poverty levels. Skyscrapers can be found alongside shanty towns, dazzling city centres alongside backward rural areas, modern industrial and financial installations alongside obsolete agriculture, the greatest of wealth alongside the deepest of poverty...

These are some of the reasons why in our work in Latin America, we give priority to productive farming projects, in order to guarantee the food security of the poor. We dedicate approximately 50% of our resources to these projects. We try to reduce the vulnerabilities of poor populations, promote agricultural and farming models better adapted to the environment, improve the productivity of the land using ecological methods, defend native seeds, sustainable agriculture and collective production and commercialisation, etc.

Forty women from three indigenous communities in Guatemala have received training in farmyard husbandry, which has helped us to be able to diversify our food and mitigate the situation of insecurity in which we live to secure daily food. We have also been able to benefit from training resources, traditionally forbidden to us, know our rights, and improve our participation in local organisations and the taking of decisions.

asia

India is one of the nations with the greatest economic growth. But 25% of its population (mainly women and children) live beneath the poverty threshold. There also exists great discrimination of women regarding men. It is estimated that there have been 8 million female foetus abortions over the last decade. In addition, there is female infanticide, one of the worst scourges in this country, where giving birth to a baby girl is a stigma for the family. To understand this, it is necessary to know and understand Indian culture; economy is a determining factor for families seeking to give birth to and raising a son and avoiding having daughters. Girls are viewed as a burden, since they “are lost” to the family and also need a dowry payment when married off. Boys, however, stay in the family, they work and support it, and when they marry they bring a dowry into the home. This also explains how most women do not receive formal education, as they are expected to look after the house and their younger siblings.

In South East Asia, trafficking in persons as well as labour and sexual exploitation are another sign of the general context of violence suffered by women, who are often only considered by their own families as a way of generating income.

In view of all this, Manos Unidas wishes to empower women through education and work: it also supports awareness-raising programmes against social injustice, which are the first steps toward creating conditions that favour and ensure the full development of women’s potentialities and capacities.

Thanks to the support of Manos Unidas, women in Uttarakhand (Northern India) have been able to improve their quality of life through income generating programmes, and in our villages community groups have been created to prevent and reduce domestic violence. In addition, the strengthening of the community organisation has allowed us to take part in the taking of decisions on all levels: family, social and political.

Going out to the peripheries

Manos Unidas/M<sup>a</sup> Eugenia Díaz

There is increasingly more social awareness, supported by the reflection of experts and specialists and disseminated by the media, that ridding the world of famine today is not a matter of lack of means but a political decision. However, we see how United Nations bodies and the major power governments do not take decisive measures to put an end to it, tolerating conflicts sustained by economic interests, for example in Congo, which brings extraordinary suffering to the population.

We see how interests are more important than people's wellbeing, especially in the case of the poor: exactly the opposite of what it should be, since the poor need even greater protection.

The Exhortation "Caritas in veritate" tells us that the development of the people is not just an economic issue, but also a moral one. "Development is impossible without upright men and women, without financiers and politicians whose consciences are finely attuned to the requirements of the common good." (Number 71). And this implies not only governments, but also multinational companies and anybody who inspires, dictates or regulates the world's principal commercial and economic regulations.

It has been the mission of Manos Unidas for more than fifty years now to promote that moral consistency, defend the value of the people in all circumstances. In this year's Report we can see specific and tangible examples of this commitment.

By financing development projects, our association makes it possible for specific aspirations from the poorest communities to become reality. Furthermore, it tries to instil in us a caring mentality and culture, in which the logic of hoarding gives way to those of dedication and gifts. Bearing in mind an idea which is valid for all is when Pope Francis asks the Church to "come out of herself" and to go out to "the peripheries", where the poorest are, and, among them, those who are hungry, those whose basic needs are not covered.

I would like to thank all Manos Unidas' members, collaborators and workers because they make it possible, year after year, that hope does not disappear from the heart of the poorest communities in the world. May God bless you and may you live with the peace of knowing you have done what you had to do!
