letter from the president

Dear Friends and Collaborators,

Here you have the Manos Unidas 2013 Annual Report. In it, we would like to present a brief overview of the Organization's activity throughout the year.

In the 2013 campaign, Manos Unidas worked for the effective equality of rights between men and women. We carried out a social awareness-raising campaign on this issue, with the slogan “There's no justice without equality”. Women all over the world are the most affected by poverty, malnutrition and illiteracy; in some cultures, their freedom of movement or their ability to make decisions is not respected, and they are frequently victims of physical, sexual and psychological violence. Manos Unidas denounces these situations of inequality and supports activities aimed at the defence of women's dignity, implementing prevention and accompaniment initiatives in situations of great poverty, favouring their social presence and overall development as a person. Manos Unidas takes women into account in all the projects it finances and is convinced that insisting on their progress is the best way for initiatives to have their effect on the development of the whole population.

“Women who suffer situations of exclusion, abuse and violence are doubly poor, because they frequently have fewer possibilities of defending their rights”, we read in Pope Francis' “Evangelii Gaudium”. 2013 was the year of this Pontiff's arrival at the Holy See, characterized as a “breath of fresh air”, thanks to whom we are encouraged every day to carry on with our commitment to the poor. It was also the year of Benedict XVI's farewell, the Pontiff who chose to voluntarily resign after leaving us a great doctrinal legacy, including the Encyclical “Caritas in veritate”, where the international rules condemning underdevelopment in a significant part of our planet are criticized with extraordinary clarity.

And in this greeting, we cannot forget to keep the Filipino people, who suffered the ravages of Typhoon Haiyan in November, in our thoughts. Our hearts went out to them and no efforts were spared.

Finally, we cannot forget that the economic difficulties faced by our country have also been felt by Manos Unidas and by those who work in this institution. The decrease in public funds earmarked for cooperation has been enormous. However, our purpose, in the midst of all these difficulties, is to maintain attention on the poor in the developing world, so they will continue to be heard, for we know that despite everything, imbalances are much greater there than here. We hope these words, and the pages of this Report, will help to express my effusive gratitude to all of you who make the continuance of this work in favour of human dignity a reality.

who are we?

Manos Unidas/Javier Mármol

In 1955 the World Union of Catholic Women's Organizations declared "war against hunger". In Spain, this call was heeded by Mujeres de Acción Católica in 1959, constituting the "Campaign against Hunger in Spain", later known as Manos Unidas.

Manos Unidas is the Spanish Catholic Church Organisation for the aid, promotion and development of the Third World. It is at the same time a Catholic and secular Non-Governmental Development Organisation (NGDO), made up of volunteers.

It is our mission to fight against famine, nutritional deficiency, poverty, disease, underdevelopment, and lack of education; and to work to eradicate their structural causes producing them: injustice, unequal distribution of goods and opportunities among people and communities, ignorance, prejudices, lack of solidarity, indifference and the crisis of human and Christian values (Articles of Association, Art. 5).

STRUCTURE

Manos Unidas has a diocesan structure, which means it is present throughout the whole of Spain. The mission of the 70 delegations is to raise the awareness of the Spanish population on the global situation, and the collecting of donations for the financing of projects supported by the Organization. Manos Unidas also has its Central Services in Madrid.

PEOPLE

Voluntary workers are one of the trademarks of Manos Unidas. From the governing bodies of the Organisation, which must be composed of volunteers, to the ground-work. In 2013, 5,278 voluntary workers regularly gave the Organisation their time and their know-how.

In addition, in 2013 we had the unconditional support of 84,524 members and collaborators, who have trusted in our work to build a better world.

Our work would be impossible without them all: volunteers, hired people, members and collaborators, parishes, schools, companies, associations and foundations, media, and everyone else who place their trust in us.

Many thanks to you all!

Manos Unidas/Marta Carreño

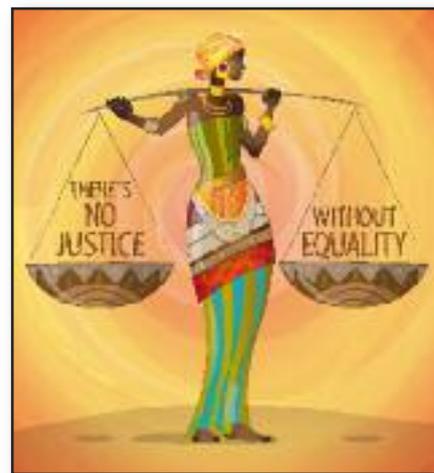

Manos Unidas, inspired by the Gospel and the Social Doctrine of the Church, maintains two lines of work:

- Raising the awareness and denouncing the existence of hunger and underdevelopment and their causes and possible remedies.
- Obtaining economic means to finance the programmes, plans and comprehensive development projects aimed at dealing with these needs.

In 2013, Manos Unidas held its campaign number LIV, with the slogan “There’s no justice without equality”. We work for the recognition of the equal dignity of men and women. Only will the firm recognition of this equality lead to a more just world, where everyone can develop to their full potential.

In today’s world, education plays a key role to put an end to the existing inequality. Two-thirds of illiterate people in the world are women, something which seriously affects their ability to live their life on equal footing with men.

Raising Public Awareness

One of the main tasks of Manos Unidas is to denounce and make the Spanish population aware of the existence of hunger and underdevelopment, as well as their causes and possible solutions.

The fight against poverty and hunger is only possible if civil society is aware, critical and united, consisting of citizens who are active, coherent, and who feel responsible for and committed to the building of a more just and united world.

Our goal for 2013 has been to generate more critical awareness regarding the realities of poverty, the exclusion and inequality that women suffer, and their lack of access to basic rights. Through education for development we have promoted awareness-raising, change of habits and attitudes. Numerous women’s testimonies have shown us that, in the fight for equality, many battles have already been won; however, there is still a lot to be done.

We have promoted Information and Communication Technologies (ICT) in order to broaden our awareness-raising scope. Social networks, online training and the Video Clip Competition have mobilized thousands of people who have joined our fight against hunger and poverty.

Manos Unidas takes part in different national and international thematic campaigns related to our mission to fight hunger and poverty, and focused on the relationship between climate justice and environmental issues, poverty and food security, and the great challenge of sustainable development.

At present, Manos Unidas is involved in the international dialogue process concerning sustainable development objectives and the new global development agenda from 2015. It also participates in the Committee on World Food Security (FAO) and works, along with other organizations, in the global campaign “One Human Family, Food for All”.

Link Operation

- In this awareness-raising task, Link Operation plays a vital role, as, through the development initiatives supported by Manos Unidas, it generates relationships between Spanish people and the communities that receive the support of Manos Unidas, bringing their situation and living conditions closer, and achieving a greater sensitization and commitment toward developing countries. En 2013, Manos Unidas carried out 490 Link Operations.

other awareness-raising activities

In April we presented the report “El desafío del hambre” (“The Hunger Challenge”), which addresses the problem of hunger and food security from the perspective of the current reality of our globalized world.

In November, Manos Unidas launched a new awareness-raising initiative: “24 horas que mueven el mundo” (“24 hours which move the world”). This initiative was held in 24 Spanish cities, with more than 40 different activities. Among all of them we highlight “Enciende la llama” (“Light the Flame”) in which a light of solidarity went round the whole globe thanks to the participation of our project local partners and beneficiaries.

At Manos Unidas we are aware that we cannot walk this path alone; that’s why we participate with other organizations in different thematic campaigns related with our mission, and we are present in both national and international networks and bodies.

The 70 Manos Unidas delegations have a leading role in these awareness and fund-raising tasks, carrying out many activities.

Operación Pincho Solidario (“Solidary Snack Operation”) This action carried out by the Orense Delegation is just a sample of the hundreds of activities carried out in Spain during our campaign.

Trips with the media

Three groups of journalists travelled to the developing countries to see the projects supported by Manos Unidas first-hand. In 2013 they visited Guatemala, Cameroon and India.

Manos Unidas/Javier Mármol

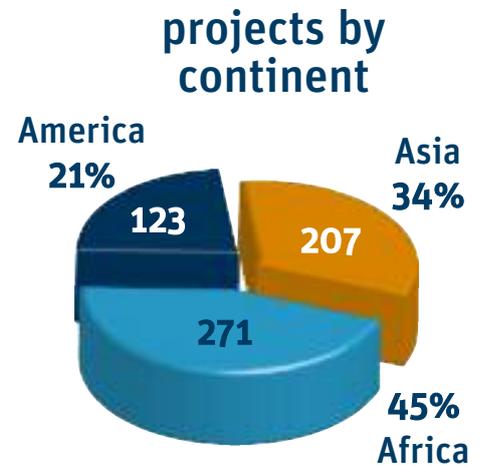

Video Clip Competition 2013-2014

The 5th Edition of the Video Clip Competition took place on 17th October with the slogan “Your point of view can change the world”. This activity, which is carried out jointly between the Central Services and delegations, and which has the support of AECID, has become a benchmark of participation and awareness-raising.

Projects

In 2013, Manos Unidas approved a total of 601 development co-operation initiatives in 57 countries of Africa, America and Asia, allocating 33,887,085 euros to mitigate the effects of poverty, exclusion and inequality.

Despite the significant decrease in funds allocated to Development Cooperation Aid in our country, once again, and thanks to the generous contributions of our more than 80,000 members, donors, and some public organizations, we managed to reach nearly 3,100,000 people, through our vast and valuable network of local partners, who are committed every day to fighting for a world that is more just and equitable for everyone.

The context in which Manos Unidas has intervened has been marked by a multitude of events, many of them recurring, such as armed conflicts (Syria, South Sudan, D.R. Congo, Somalia...), with the corresponding incessant violations of human rights, or natural disasters and their devastating effects on millions of victims.

Examples of this are the periodic droughts and floods in regions such as the Horn of Africa, the Sahel area, or Northern India, which continue to show the relation between the increase in the frequency and intensity of these natural phenomena and climate change caused by increased emissions of CO₂.

Manos Unidas/Javier Mármol

We have also accompanied communities at their times of greatest need, such as the recent Typhoon Haiyan tragedy in Philippines, where Manos Unidas responded with a first delivery of funds (248,000 euros) to help the victims.

Manos Unidas has tried to respond to these tragedies, through 27 emergency actions, with a total amount of approximately 1,300,000 euros, benefiting about 614,000 people, victims of conflicts, (Syrian refugees in Jordan, South Sudan, Somalia, Central African Republic ...), victims of hunger (Ethiopia, Eritrea, Mali, North Kenya...) or victims of natural disasters (Philippines, Guatemala, North India, Haiti..).

The 601 development projects approved this year have mainly contributed to the improvement of access to water, sanitation, education and health of populations lacking these basic services today, and which are not guaranteed to them by their own countries.

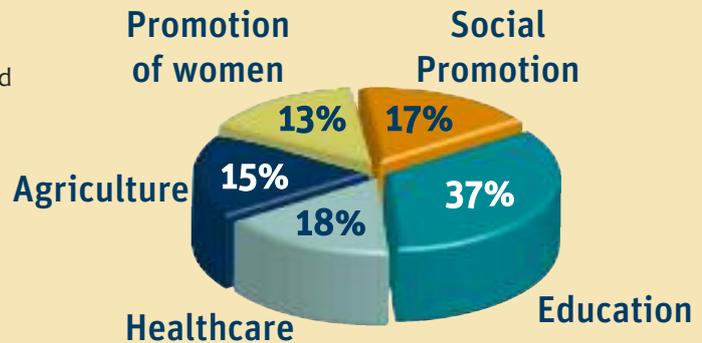

The improvement of local capacities in order to achieve a better and greater economic autonomy; awareness-raising on rights, mainly of women; the work for peace and the fight against hunger, by means of the right to food, have also been the main objectives on which our work has been focused.

The African continent is part of the everyday news, not only because of the many conflicts that continue to plague the continent, but also, for reasons a little more encouraging, such as the fact that it is gaining weight and importance in the global economic framework.

Africa no longer relies solely on Official Development Assistance (ODA), but receives much more private capital through direct investments made by the countries known as BRICS (the emerging countries Brazil, Russia, India, China and South Africa), the issuance of public debt and remittances coming from immigrants.

Though Africa still cannot renounce the ODA, this new scenario means that new challenges are raised for the continent not without problems, such as land grabbing and the plundering of the natural resources by foreign powers.

At Manos Unidas we are very attentive to these circumstances and their consequences. Therefore we support food security and family-based agriculture with projects aimed at training for small farmers and promoting crop diversity.

An example of this line of work is one of the projects that we have supported in Tanzania, a sustainable development and training project with 18 groups of farmers, each of them consisting of 315 people, where productivity has been improved by 200% the program also introduces new farming methods in rural communities, through training programmes and the strengthening of cooperative system values.

Latin America is the continent of inequality.

Latin-American relationships -between persons and countries- are based on inequality. Some countries even appear as “emerging”, with high levels of income, but in all of them most of their inhabitants suffer abject poverty levels. Skyscrapers can be found alongside shanty towns, dazzling city centres alongside backward rural areas, modern industrial and financial installations alongside obsolete agriculture, the greatest wealth alongside the most abject poverty...

In 2013, productive farming projects made up 50% of the total. Many of them are represented by family-based agriculture. They contribute to ensure food security. Through processes lasting several years, different stages are being accomplished: training, production and marketing, and collaborating in the development of families. Secondly, social projects represent a quarter of the total. Many of them are support for entrepreneurs, production units, human rights...

In Ambato, Ecuador, like in many places in Latin America, the population's main problem is the lack of water suitable for human consumption. Families use the water they take directly from ditches, rarely boiling it, with the consequent impact on the health of the population, particularly children, the most vulnerable group. The project has a twin-track approach: the physical construction of the water system and the training of the population in organisational and health issues. Organisation will make the maintenance of the water installation sustainable. This is one of the 10 health projects which we have supported in 2013 in Latin America.

The Asian continent has been marked, throughout the year 2013, by natural tragedies and man-made conflicts: earthquakes, typhoons, flooding, wars, etc.

India, despite having one of the highest economic growth rates in the world, is still a poor country: about 25% of the population live below the poverty threshold, and there are significant inequalities. The vast majority of women do not have access to formal education, and, as in other regions of the world, they are victims of poverty, malnutrition, illiteracy, sexual harassment, rape, physical and psychological abuse and trafficking for purposes of prostitution or forced labour. Nearly 25,000 cases of rape were recorded last year. Female infanticide is one of the worst scourges of this country. In Hindu culture, girls are viewed as a burden, through marriage a dowry must be given and on top of that, they are lost to the family.

In Southeast Asia, one of the major problems is human trafficking.

In Cambodia, only in the capital, Phnom Penh, it is calculated that there are 8,000 children employed in the sex industry, and 28,000 child slaves. In addition, conflicts and situations of poverty generate large displacements of population.

Millions of unregistered immigrants live in Thailand, mainly in Burma.

In Syria, the civil war has caused an increase in the number of Syrian refugees in neighbouring countries. The majority of these refugees are children, women and the elderly who are living without a legal identity.

However, no doubt the most devastating news has been Typhoon Haiyan which struck Philippines and affected other countries such as Vietnam, causing floods and landslides.

Manos Unidas has done all it has been able to do to respond to these situations. An emergency account was opened for the Philippines, where it has been working for 25 years, the funds being used to ensure the survival of the population and the reconstruction of numerous villages. It has also supported the refugee population in the different countries with projects ranging from more urgent issues, such as the provision of food, medicines and psychological support and accommodation, to promoting the creation of education and employment integration opportunities. And, as a constant aspect of our work, it has sought to strengthen the role of women through education and work, creating community groups to prevent domestic violence, seeking their participation in all decision-making processes, and helping them generate their own income.

“Money must serve,
not rule”

Manos Unidas/Javier Mármol

In his Exhortation “Evangelii Gaudium” (“The Joy of the Gospel”), Pope Francis criticises the “invisible hand” of the economy lacking a human purpose, which adds “to the ranks of the excluded”, of people who are treated, he says, as “leftovers”, and asks politicians for an economic reform capable of putting the economy at the service of the human being. “Money Must Serve, Not Rule!” he says.

“We must never forget that the planet belongs to all mankind and is meant for all mankind; the mere fact that some people are born in places with fewer resources or less development does not justify the fact that they are living with less dignity. [...] To speak properly of our own rights, we need to broaden our perspective and to hear the plea of other peoples and other regions than those of our own country. We need to grow in a solidarity which “would allow all peoples to become the artisans of their destiny”, (N. 190).

With these and other words, Pope Francis invites us not to lower our guard against the world’s inequalities, to continue working for a more just situation. And one way to do this is to support the work of organisations such as Manos Unidas. This Association has great reliability and many years of experience at the service of the poor, reflected in many schools, dispensaries, maternity clinics, water wells and agricultural initiatives. It has an austere spirit. It does not perform this task on its own, or with loyalty to a particular charisma, but in the name of the Spanish Church, which wants to be close to the poor and be their “Good Samaritan”. Yes, the Church, community of the baptised, wants to be, in the words of Saint John XXIII, “like the fountain of living water which quenches the people’s thirst”.

Therefore, my dear members, collaborators and workers of Manos Unidas, congratulations and thank you for what you do, year after year, with your hands, your money, your prayers and your dedication, to make all this possible, and for creating hope in the hearts of the poorest communities in the world. May God bless you and may you live with the peace of knowing you have done what you had to, in other words, share what you are, and what you have with those most in need!
